Boston, April 29-10 P. M. A telegraphic dispatch having reached here this morning, announcing that the Hon. Daniel Webster had left New York in the early train for Boston, a large concourse of people assembled this afternoon in the immediate vicinity of the Revere House, under the expectation that he would address his fellowcitizens on the great questions of the day. At five o'clock, about the time the New York cars were expected, the crowd had greatly increased in numbers, there being not much less than five thousand persons assembled.

At a quarter past five o'clock, an open barouche, drawn by two horses, was seen coming up the street which contained Mr. Webster, Mr. Choate, and one or two other distinguished gentlemen. He was received with repeated cheers.

After the cheering had subsided, Benjamin Curtis, Esq., in behalf of the citizens of Boston, addressed Mr. Webster in a brief, but highly complimentary speech, in which he alluded to the course which for settlement. As soon as Mr. Curtis had concluded his remarks. reply, which was the signal for renewed cheering .as for the public generally, the so-called accommodations for hearing, were of such a limited, ill-conwell known clearness of his enunciation.

MR. WEBSTER'S SPEECH. Mr. Webster commenced by observing that he was sorry to say that in the attempts to settle the great and exciting questions which were now agitating the progress had not been made to secure a perfect reconciliation of conflicting interests ; but still there was ground to indulge the hope that an adjustment, satisfactory to every section of our wide and diversified Union, would vet be made.

He fully appreciated the kind congratulations of his fellow-citizens—fully appreciated the declaration that they did not come here as partizans. This was not the place nor the time to discuss party questions. He had in his own humble way made an effort to conciliate-to calm that excited state of feeling which agitated the public mind of the North and of the South—and to restore to the federal government the is there in profusion—the only trouble is to make ability to conduct its affairs, as heretofore, with effective unity. It could not be concealed, for the fact was evident to all, that it was out of the power of Congress to legislate for the general interests of he loves best-he wants quiet at home in order to the whole country, until such measures should first mature his plans and perfect his operations. If he be adopted which would have a direct tendency to allay that excitement which all patriots must depre-

In this condition of things-in this peculiar situation of affairs-he had thought that the Commonwealth of Massachusetts would have approved of all honest endeavors to allay exciting dissentions, and that public sentiment everywhere, irrespective of locality, would approve the efforts such as he had alluded to. The question now was, whether old Massachusetts -intellectual in character-of the highest moral sentiments-rigid in her sense of justice-a State that has never swerved from the path of rectitude and honor-whether she would, in this her day of trial, stand to the truth as it existed, against not merely temptation. but against her own prejudices. She had conquered a sterile soil and an unfriendly climate. She had conquered every body's prejudi ces, and the question now to determine was, whether she would conquer her own. This was the question which he had now to ask.

He had not stepped backwards-he had abandoned no old positions. He had undertaken to restore of their situation, and by inculcating a true spirit of which is about four inches in length, has lately beacy of States bound together by mere legal ties, but hearts together. Besides, the people were very much annoyed by the rattling of a cart, loaded with iron, which, it is said, was engaged by some of Mr. W.'s free soil friends, to make as much noise during the delivery of the say $8,000, and the total profit amounts to $117,300. speech as possible. Mr. W. spoke about twenty minutes. When he commenced speaking, bouquets were showered upon him by the fair inmates of the Revere House, who occupied every window, and whose gay and lovely appearance lent a peculiar enough to do it with.

" Pity his Family."

A man falls into embarrassments, which ultimate ly overwhelm him in bankruptcy or drive him into roguery and crime. He was yesterday respected, influential and supposed to be affluent, and his family were treated and treated themselves accordingly: but to-day he is disgraced and steered clear of-without resources or prospects—very likely in prison and exposed to ignominious punishment. "Vile wretch!" say the million; "it is good enough for him, but we must pity his poor family."

Certainly, we must pity them—pity all who suffer—still more all who sin and suffer. They need pity, and there is no danger that we shall pity them too much. But the impression conveyed of the innocence of the fallen man's family, and their unmerited exposure to want and ignominy, is often very far from the truth.

In fact, half the men who are loathed as dragging down their families to shame and destitution are really themselves dragged down by those families— driven to bankruptcy, shame and crime by the thoughtless and basely selfish extravagance of wife and children. Let a man be in the way of receiving Mr. W. had recently taken in the Senate on the exciting questions which were still before the country hands, and his family can rarely be made to comprehend and realize that there is any limit to give and spend. Fine dresses and ornaments for wife and Mr. Webster rose from his seat in the barouche to daughters, spending-money and broadcloth for hopeful sons-costly parties every now and then, and Unfortunately for the reporters of the press, as well richer furniture and more of it at all times-these are a few of the blind drains on the governor's means which are perpetually in action.
